Gen Z Recommendations

Engage with Gen Z viewers through tailored content surrounding film memes and fandoms across social platforms. Doing so allows for connections to be made with Gen Z audiences, leveraging their interest back into The Oscars.

This can include videos using trending hashtags and audios on platforms like TikTok, Instagram Reels, and Youtube Shorts.

Gen Z connects with brands online who want to connect with them. Through comment replies and encouraging conversations, The Oscars brand can feel more accessible to Gen Z.

Gen Z content is also driven by their love for celebrities. Content targeting the generation can include nominees, i.e. interviews, stories and spotlights.

Content beyond social media is also important to Gen Z, advertising to Gen Z on their favorite streaming platforms will grab their attention.

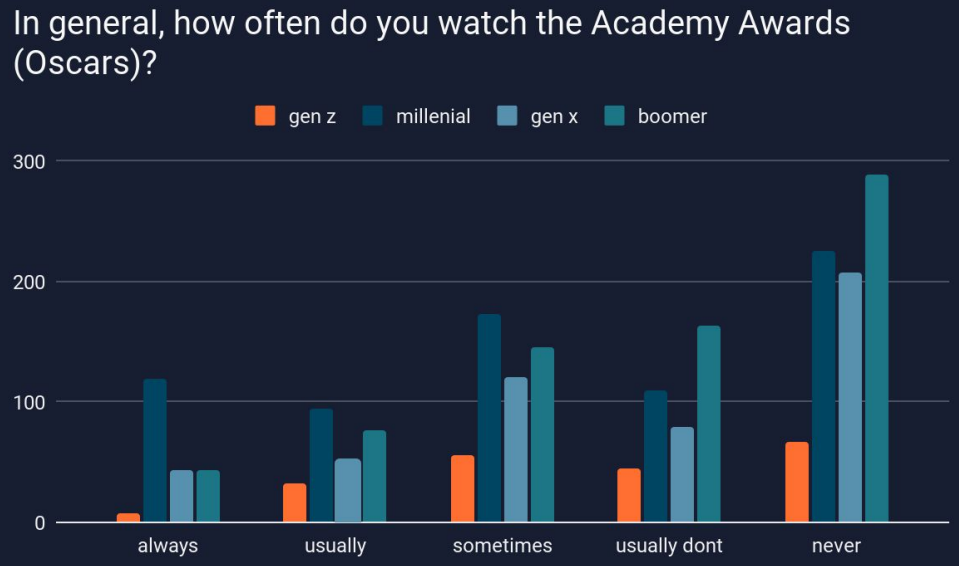

Further Social Recommendations

One way Generation Z was inspired by the movies this year was treating going to the theater like an event. Gen Z film lovers and casual viewers alike dressed up for “Barbenheimer” when they went to the theater.

The Oscars can capitalize on this by organizing social events that make watching films exciting.

AUDIENCE COMPOSITION

- Consistent Oscars Viewership:
  - 58% male
  - 3.6% Gen Z, 55% Millennial, 20% Gen X, 20% Baby Boomer
  - 93% consider themselves film fans, 65% avid film fans

Morning Consult, National Tracking Poll, Feb 2023

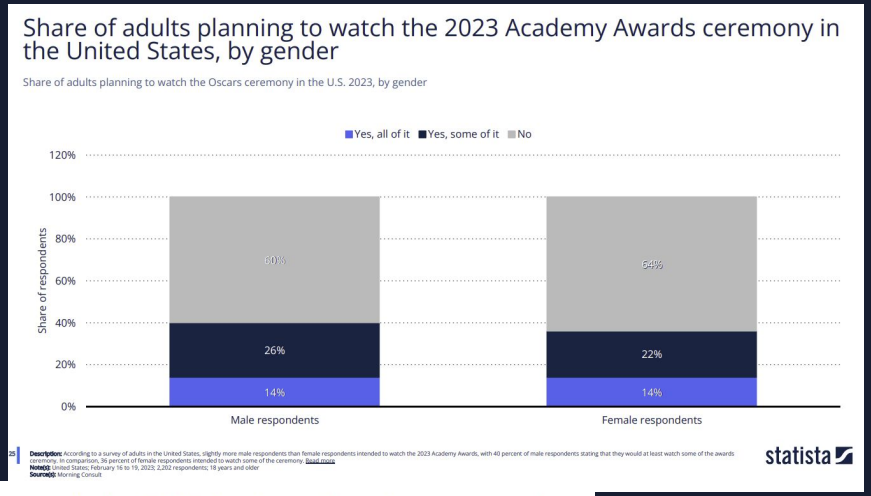

AUDIENCE COMPOSITION

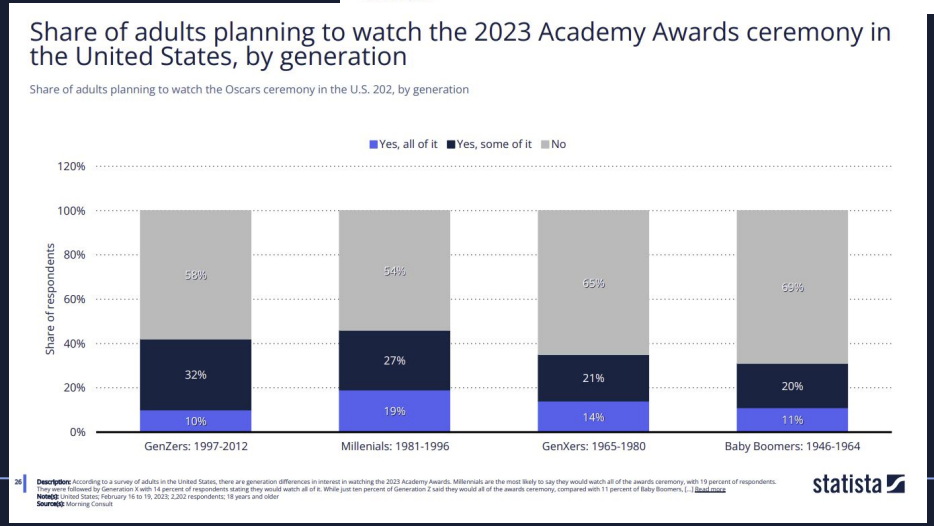

Gen Z and women often play the role of casual viewers during the Oscars, occasionally tuning in to witness the cinematic ceremony unfold. Yet, an opportunity awaits to enhance viewership consistency. Gen Z's unfamiliarity with the Oscars fuels this gap. By infusing tailored content into the event, there's an increased chance to captivate these audiences.

AUDIENCE: 2023 Predictions

While only 10% of Gen Z plans to watch all of the Oscars, 42% of Gen Z anticipate observing at least some of the show.

Desires to tune in may be disrupted by inconveniences or controversies. However, there's still room to spark viewership interest.

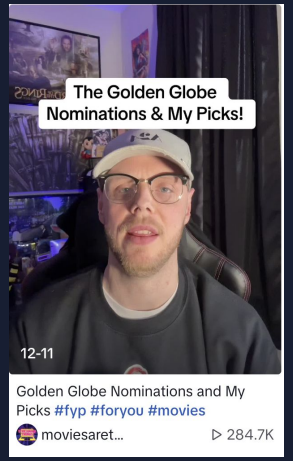

AUDIENCE SENTIMENT ANALYSIS

- Celebrities take the stage as the topic of conversation across Gen Z-led internet trends.
- The Golden Globes takes a back seat as Gen Z audiences reveal decreased interest.
- Memes and fandoms empower Gen Z film discussions throughout the year.

CONVERSATIONS: Topics

Segmented social media posts uncover movies, television, and music as the main conversation topics associated with the Oscars. These topics are relative to mass Twitter (X) discussions. Conversations about the Oscars are also twice as likely to be about fashion and 60% more likely to be about gaming, compared to the general top content on Twitter.

CONVERSATIONS: Host Sentiment

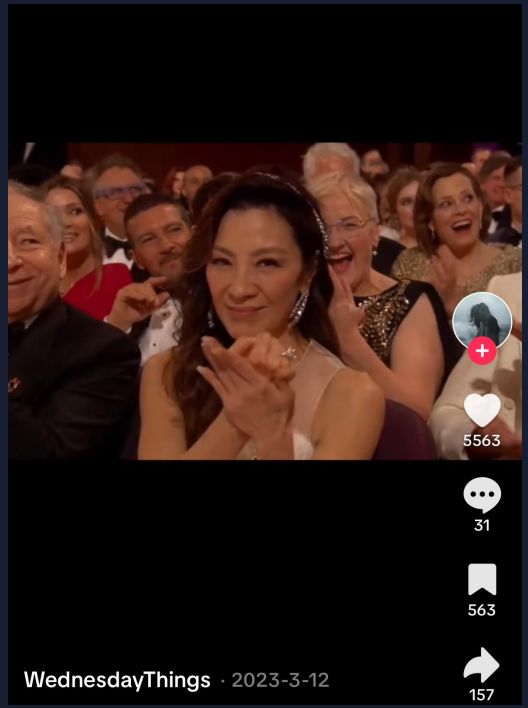

Social Sentiment	Positive	Negative	Mentions with sentiment	Sample (total mentions)	Net sentiment
Overall (past 2 years)	79%	20%	3,030,000	23,499,000	58

CONVERSATIONS: Host Sentiment

The Oscars host sets the tone for the evening. Audiences enjoy a charismatic, charming personality. An entertainer who engages the crowd and stirs excitement may build conversation and increase positive sentiment.

- A good host can go two different ways: 1. Lean into what makes their personality unique and entertain the guest with their perspective 2. Act as a neutral announcer who highlights the celebrity audience.
    - Jimmy Kimmel's 2023 monologue was notable for highlighting attendees such nominee Michelle Yeoh and Gen Z favorite Andrew Garfield.

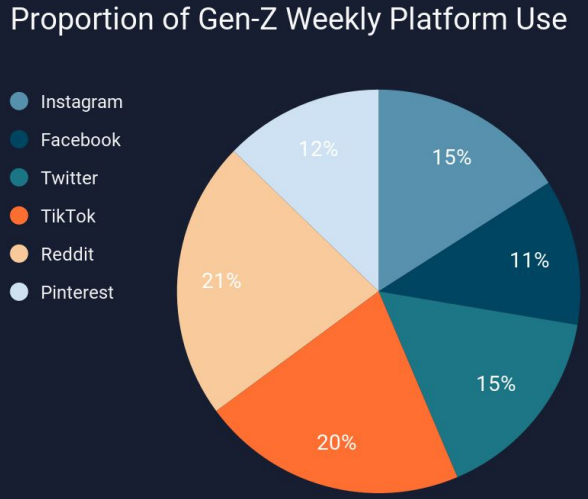

CONVERSATIONS: Host Sentiment

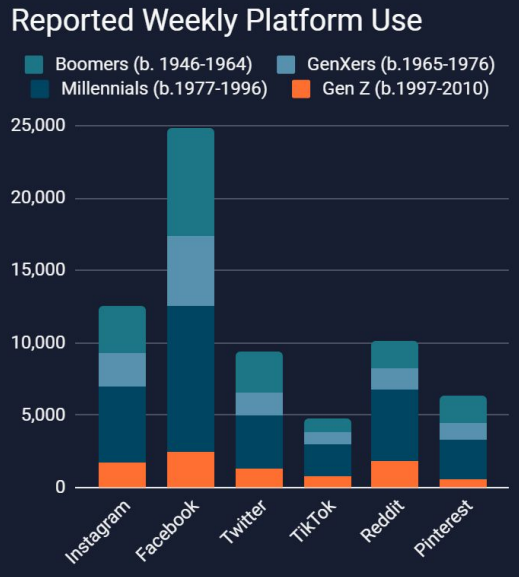

A widely-known and neutral host will incite positive feedback. Research reveals that Chris Rock, 2016's host, garnered negative viewer criticisms compared to a host like Jimmy Kimmel. An energetic, respectful personality will most likely appease the masses.

Top searches on TikTok for Oscars hosts included Anne Hathaway and James Franco's 2011 show, which many enjoyed for its "chaotic" memorability.

Research shows that Gen Z audiences enjoy humorous segments and the celebrities in attendance. Hosts that can incorporate nominees and guests in their monologues and segments seem more popular among social media-driven audiences.

PLATFORM CONSUMPTION

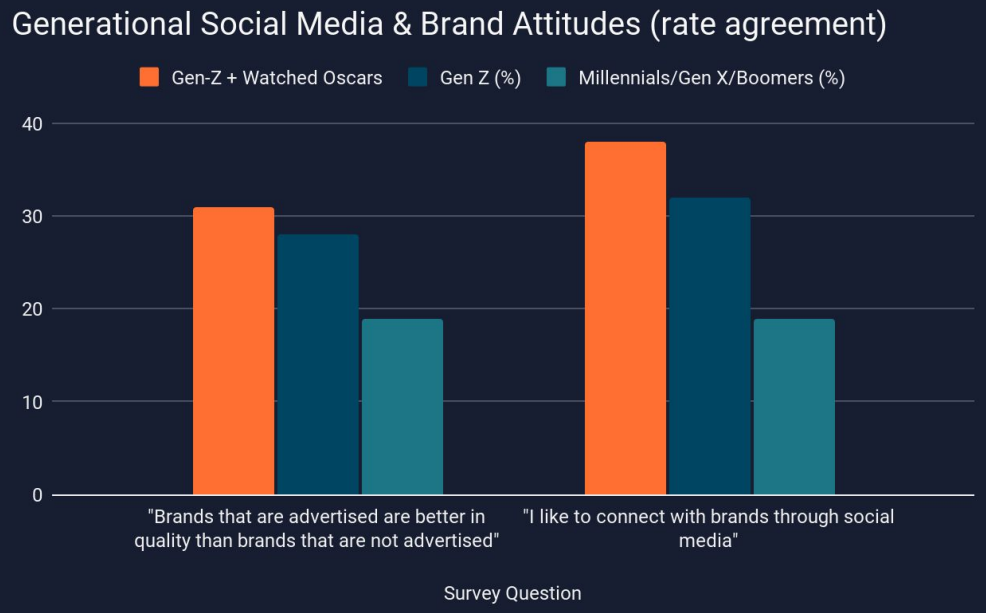

Across all generations, Facebook, followed by Instagram, leads weekly usage. However, Reddit (21%) and TikTok (20%) have the highest percentage of Gen Z weekly users, followed by Twitter (15%) and Instagram (15%).

MRI Simmons 2021 October Digital Life Study (SP21 USA)

SOCIAL MEDIA AD PERCEPTION: Quality & Connection

Compared to other generations, Gen Z is more inclined to develop an affinity (perceived quality & connection) toward brands and products when served social media advertisements. Meaning, Gen-Z, and Gen-Z Oscar viewers are inclined to view brand's social media activity more favorably than other generations.

MRI Simmons 2021 October Digital Life Study (SP21 USA)

SOCIAL MEDIA AD PERCEPTION: Gen Z Breakdown

Gen-Z reports perceiving brands that are advertised on social media as being higher quality 37% more than other generations. They also express desire to connect with brands on social media 68% more than other generations.

MRI Simmons 2021 October Digital Life Study (SP21 USA)

SOCIAL MEDIA INTERACTIONS: Generational Followings

Gen-Z is more likely to follow profiles centered on leisure (entertainment, tech/gaming, beauty, fashion, etc.) opposed to other generations, who are more likely to follow news and Information-type profiles, or none at all. Specifically, 60% of Gen-Z respondents reported they follow entertainment profile types on social media, over double (123% more) than other generations.

MRI Simmons 2021 October Digital Life Study (SP21 USA)

SOCIAL MEDIA AD PERCEPTIONS: Endorsements

Mintel. Digital Advertising - US - 2023; sample: 696 total; 134 gen z

While Millenials are most likely to be swayed by influencer endorsements, Gen-Z is more impacted by celebrity endorsements than any other generation. Specifically, Gen-Z is 29% more likely to report that digital ads with celebrity endorsements help them consider purchases, compared to the general population.

STREAMING AD PERCEPTION

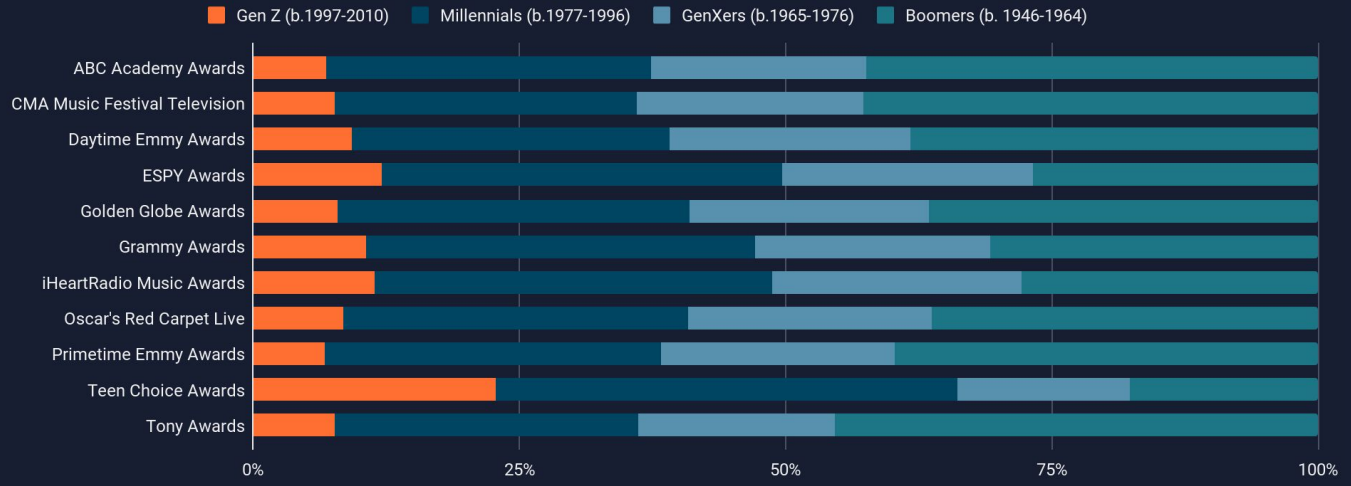

Out of a robust survey sample (n=49,000), reported purchase intention is over 6 times higher when advertised on networks/streaming services compared to social media. This is especially true for Gen-Z that reported watching the Oscars as 29% report they are more likely to purchase when advertised via streaming, compared to 16% of other generations. Though social media may serve for brand development, increasing purchase intention may come easier from network/streaming.

MRI Simmons 2021 October Digital Life Study (SP21 USA)

COMPETITOR MARKET ANALYSIS

Reported watch history for the last 12 months reveals that the Oscars leads award shows in overall viewership. However, Gen-Z viewership is highest for the Grammys, followed by the Oscars and Golden Globes. This is likely due to Gen Z's increased interest in the music industry taking center stage (with fan accounts growing in popularity for Gen Z, many of which follow certain music artists) followed by the film and TV industries

Gen Z Oscars conversations extend before and after the show on TikTok

Content creators across different videos share opinions, predictions, and reflections on the 2024 Oscar nominations, providing diverse perspectives on winners, losers, surprises, and controversies. Notably, videos that invite discussions by sharing predictions in advance foster engagement and speculation within the audience.

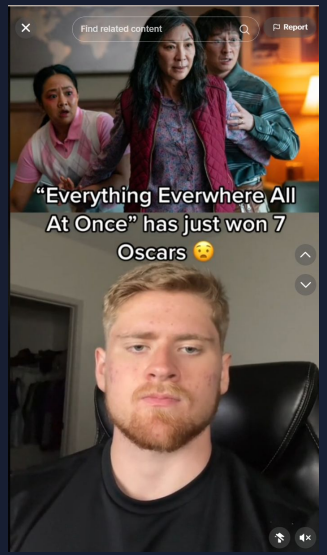

These are the most important pieces of content to Gen Z that get the most amount of interactions. This matters because The Oscars brand can follow trends that interest Gen Z. Tapping into what drives Gen Z Oscars conversations can aid in deciding what to highlight in Oscars advertising.

TikTok acts as a source of information and entertainment for Gen Z's Oscars content

- Brief, objective content gains 900,000+ views, potentially serving as viewers' first exposure to Oscar wins or nominations, especially for those who missed the live show.
- Creator shares animated feature predictions, agreeing with most but challenging one controversial choice, predicting Super Mario Bros." Movie over "Across the Spider-Verse" due to Hollywood trends.
- Popular movie content creator shares Oscar predictions two days before nominations, sparking varied discussions in the comments. Notable controversies around "Barbie" and "Oppenheimer" predictions.
- Reflective video gains 40,000+ views, discussing past Oscar upsets and surprise nominations. Highlights unexpected predictions and notes the competitive acting categories, citing "Anatomy of a Fall" as a possible surprise nomination.
- Prediction overview video, focusing on best actor category, includes a prideful caveat. Creator emphasizes the deserving nature of each individual on their list.

NOMINATIONS & PREDICTIONS

Opinions on 2024 Oscar nominations listed as ‘winners and losers,’ creator @camwalsh27 calls out “Oppenheimer” and “Poor Things”’ ‘sweep,’ and expresses “Iron Claws” ‘loss’ “...with a heavy heart.” This type of nomination overview is popular, expressing primarily opinions, arguing for or against a set of

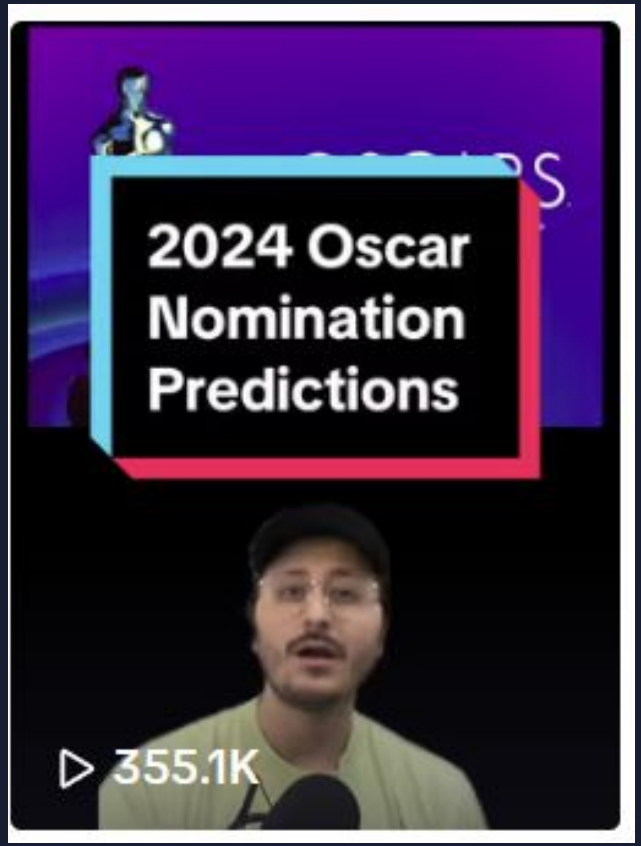

With over 900,000 views, @relayts’ video demonstrates how simple, objective content can earn a spotlight moment of its own. Such videos may play a larger role for viewers, announcing exciting nominations or wins that they may have missed.

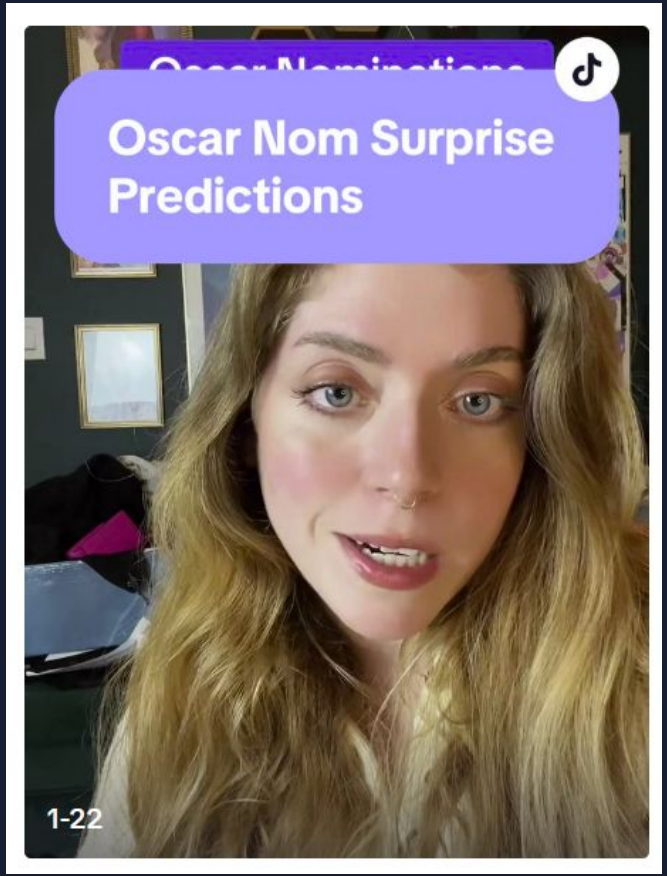

NOMINATIONS & PREDICTIONS

Posting 2 days before the release of Oscars nominations (2/21/24), popular movie content creator @cinema.joe briefly shares his predictions. They share which they are more confident in, but provide little reasoning as to why. This leaves the comments to a more varied discussion, postulating their own theories as to which titles and actors are likely to get nominated. Unsurprisingly, comments around “Barbie” and “Oppenheimer” are the most controversial, but Zac Efron, Paloma Diamond, and others are discussed with enthusiasm. Again, this ‘talking head’ style of video tends to be the prevailing format for simply listing out predictions.

NOMINATIONS & PREDICTIONS

This unique angle from user @jstoobs gained 40,000+ views, reflecting on past Oscar nominations, including both "upsets" like "Nope" and "surprise nominations," like "All Quiet on the Western Front." Accordingly, they share their most unexpected predictions, noting the crowded and competitive acting categories. They name "Anatomy of a Fall," as a possible surprise nomination and describe it as "very impressive and very Oscar-y." This comment encapsulates some of the elusiveness associated with the Academy decision-making process.

NOMINATIONS & PREDICTIONS

Similar to many content creators, this video overviews their predictions, specifically dedicating a video to best actor. It includes a caveat, as the creator emphasizes pride for the list they curated and notes that the reason they like it so much is because “every single one of the individuals deserve that honor.”

BARBIE CONTROVERSY

The debates over gender bias, particularly in the exclusion of Margot Robbie and Greta Gerwig, raise questions about the Oscars' inclusivity. The sentiment, as reflected on platforms like TikTok, indicates a potential misalignment between the Academy's decisions and public expectations, impacting the Oscars' reputation.

By understanding the contention that surrounds certain nomination outcomes, Oscars advertising can detect the shortcomings that may deter watchers. To take action, advertisements need to be deliberate in their decision to mention these controversies or not.

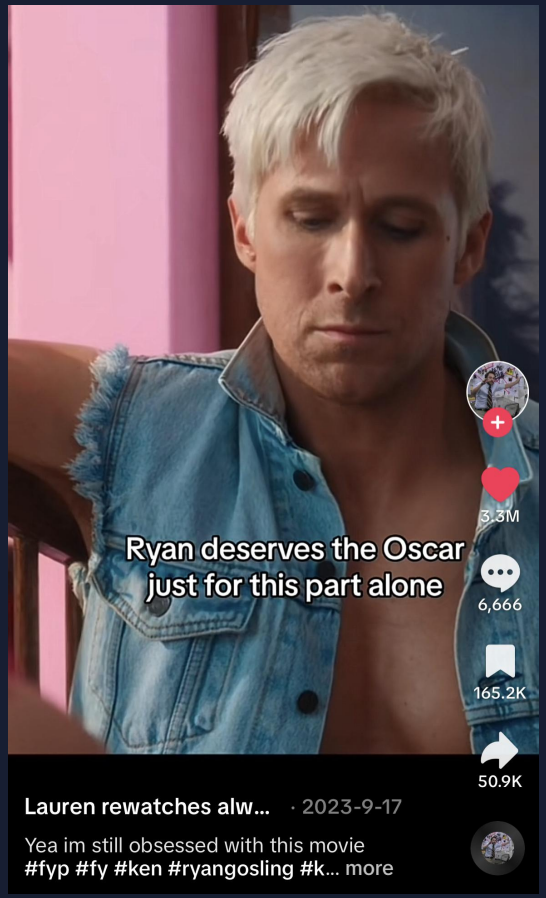

The resulting advertisements should lean into positive sentiments surrounding the successes of the current nominees to steer conversation.

BARBIE CONTROVERSY

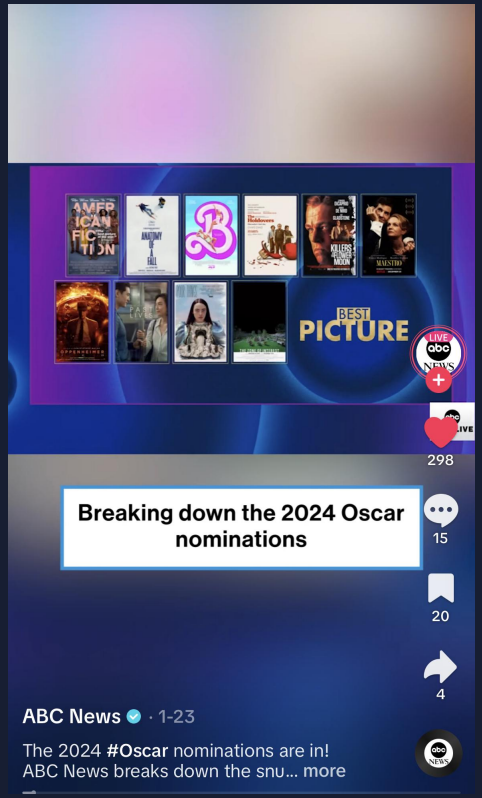

- TikTok expresses admiration for Gosling's improvised “Barbie” scene, advocating for an Oscar win, while some comments criticize the potential overlooking of Margot Robbie's performance, igniting controversy over gender bias in award recognition.
- ABC News covers the popularity of “Oppenheimer” and Lily Gladstone's historic nomination, but deems “Barbie” a "huge disappointment" without recognition for Robbie and Gerwig, addressing the controversy surrounding the snubs.
- Chris Olsen's TikTok skit gains widespread agreement, highlighting the irony of Gosling's nomination while Robbie and Gerwig are overlooked, resonating with the audience and accumulating millions of views.
- A small creator critiques the controversy around Gerwig and Robbie's snubs, applauding Lily Gladstone's nomination but facing criticism for discussing "white feminism" issues in relation to “Barbie”. The comments reflect a divided opinion on the film's worthiness.
- David Spade analyzes "barbiegate," explaining the challenges of lead actor versus supporting categories and the perceived bias against comedies in the Academy Awards. While acknowledging America Ferrera's nomination, comments express reservations about “Barbie's” Oscar-worthiness.

BARBIE CONTROVERSY

Expressing their “obsession” with Gerwig’s “Barbie”, this TikTok calls out Ryan’s acting, suggesting Gosling should win an Oscar for his performance. Many comments note they heard this particular moment was improvised, earning more praise. Some comments, however, allude to the controversy of Gosling winning an award for the “Barbie” movie, “what about margot 😭😭 she's the one deserving the oscar” [1834 likes] “I agree but also if a man gets an Oscar for the Barbie movie I will unalive myself” [14,000 likes].

BARBIE CONTROVERSY

In a 3 minute post from ABC news, featuring a 'live' news segment, they discuss "Oppenheimer's" popularity with 13 nominations, Lily Gladstone's historical nomination, Emma Stone's multiple nominations. They address 'snubs' with "Barbie", noting though it has a significant number of nominations, it's ultimately "a huge disappointment overall" without Robbie and Gerwig getting recognition.

BARBIE CONTROVERSY

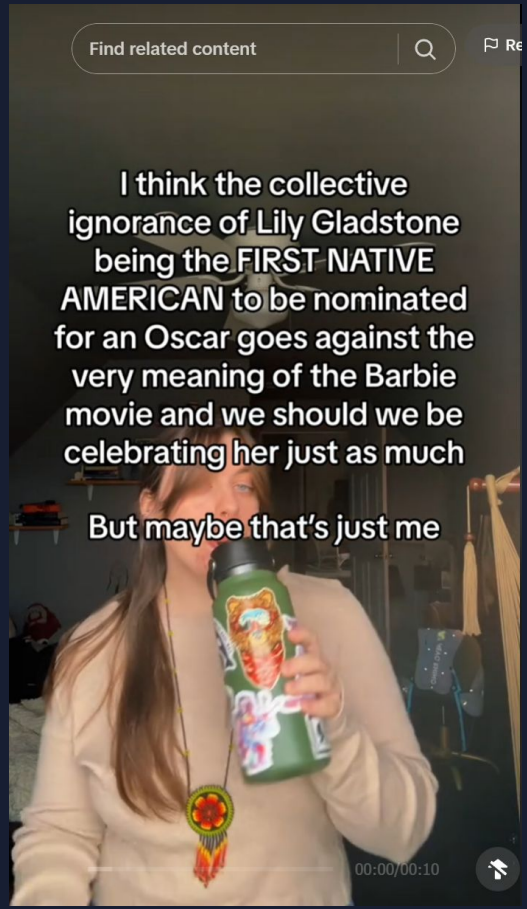

Creator Chris Olsen shares a skit highlighting a popular sentiment, regarding the 'irony,' of Gosling's nomination and the absence of Robbie and Gerwig. Gaining nearly 7 million views, most of the comments are in agreement.

Some of the social media conversation around the Barbie Oscar Nomination snubs may be being conflated with this highly circulated clip of Gosling with puzzled expression, after winning the Critics Choice best song award.

BARBIE CONTROVERSY

With 1.5+ million views, this small creator calls out Lily Gladstone's nomination, in contrast to the controversy around Gerwig and Margot's 'snubs.' Considering many of the top comments, a common consensus seems to have been that Gerwig and/or Margot deserved to be nominated, and Gladstone deserves to win. Some commenters shared critical opinions, criticizing "Barbie" and the extensive conversation, referring to "white feminism."

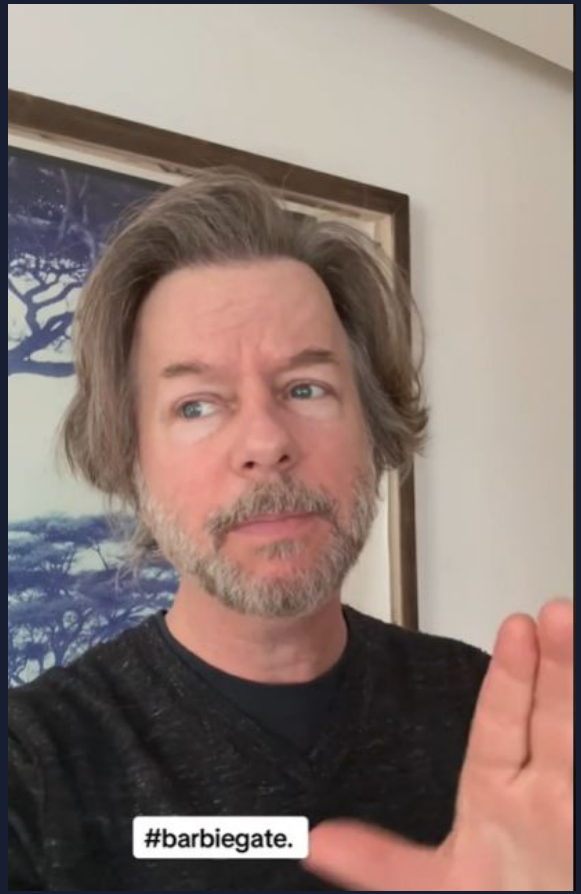

BARBIE CONTROVERSY

David Spade shares his take and a potential explanation for what he calls “barbiegate.” He explains the dynamic difference between nomination categories, noting the lead actor win would be more challenging than supporting, referring to Gosling's spot over Robbie’s.

He also claims, “...comedies are notoriously treated kind of sh* in the showbiz world, especially Academy [Awards.]”

The top comment positively points out America Ferrera’s nomination, however, many reveal reservations about their opinions on the quality of the Barbie movie, ‘siding’ with the Academy choice, “Barbie wasn't bad but in no way was it Oscar-worthy. “Oppenheimer”, “Poor Things”; those are the movies that win awards.”

HOST & PRESENTERS

Many conversations around hosts go beyond the surface level, discussing topics such as the appropriateness of jokes, and what attributes they look for in a personality. This category of Oscar content tends to be more divided, with stronger opinions advocating for or against the presence of certain celebrities.

- Jimmy Kimmel's use of humor in addressing a past incident as an Oscars host is well-received, with praise for incorporating popular celebrities into the joke.
- Mixed opinions arise about Kimmel's joke during a conversation with Malala, sparking a debate on alternative hosts like Hasan Minhaj.
- Celebrity guests Maya Rudolph, Tina Fey, and Amy Poehler receive positive comments and little controversy at the 2022 Oscars.
- A critical commentary video highlights James Franco and Anne Hathaway as being among the worst Oscar hosts, generating diverse opinions.
- A 2021 Brut. video explains the absence of an Oscars host for a second year, linked to Kevin Hart stepping down due to controversy, leading to concerns about declining popularity in comments.

SPEECHES & PERFORMANCES

The most popular content is often emotionally charged, especially regarding acceptance speeches. It is also common for TikTok social content to reminisce on the most memorable moments from previous Oscar Award ceremonies, allowing them to remain part of the conversation for years to come. In addition to heartfelt highlights, iconic looks or humorous points gain many views and comments. From an organic search, it is more common to see positive content, rather than criticism regarding speeches and performances.

- Ke Huy Quan's emotional Oscar win last year garnered overwhelming support, with influencers and brands celebrating his perseverance.
- Lupita Nyong'o's 2014 Best Supporting Actress win resurfaced, praised for her stunning dress and authentic speech.
- Jennifer Lawrence's iconic 2013 Oscar moment, tripping on the stairs, was reposted in late 2023, emphasizing her relatability and humility.
- Lady Gaga's 2019 Oscar performance received acclaim for her powerful singing and piano skills, evoking emotional reactions.
- Rihanna's 2023 Oscar performance was positively received, with comments expressing excitement about her 'return' to the stage and praising her singing skills.

FASHION & RED CARPET

Fashion content follows different trends than predictions or performances, as the format of the posts is focused on aesthetics. While reviews are still subjective, it requires less ‘background knowledge,’ to appeal to the average viewer. Fashion-focused accounts have a natural "in" when it comes to Oscars content, showcasing some of the most glamorous red carpet looks of the year.

- E! News leverages the glambot, featuring Cara Delevingne, generating a remarkable 48.6 million views. While some comments criticize Delevingne's attitude, the charismatic glambot operator, Cole Walliser, receives positive attention.
- Gaining over 10 million views, this type of TikTok simply shares popular or controversial red carpet looks.
- A popular video from Variety Magazine shares some of the ‘best dressed’ looks from the Oscars red carpet, with detailed commentary.

FASHION & RED CARPET

From E! News, Cara Delevingne shoots with the high-speed, slow-motion camera, the famous “glambot,” on many red carpets. Garnering an impressive 48.6 million views, these types of videos feature popular celebrities, attracting staggering numbers..

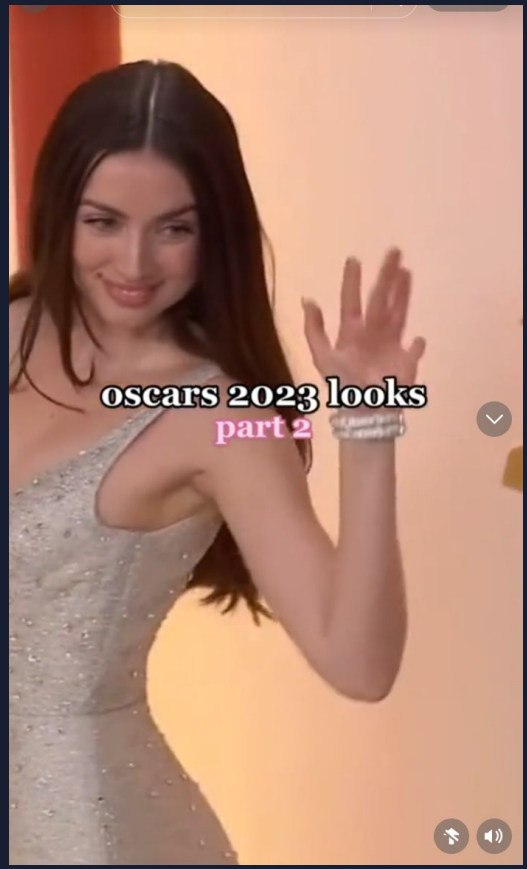

Cara serves as the focal point for the caption and most comments. Some are negative, complaining about the actress’ poor attitude, but many emphasize favor toward the glambot’s charismatic operator, Cole Walliser.

FASHION & RED CARPET

Gaining over 10 million views, this type of TikTok simply shares popular or controversial red carpet looks. While this format has the potential for high volumes of views and likes, the engagement in the comments is limited, with 2,030 total comments.

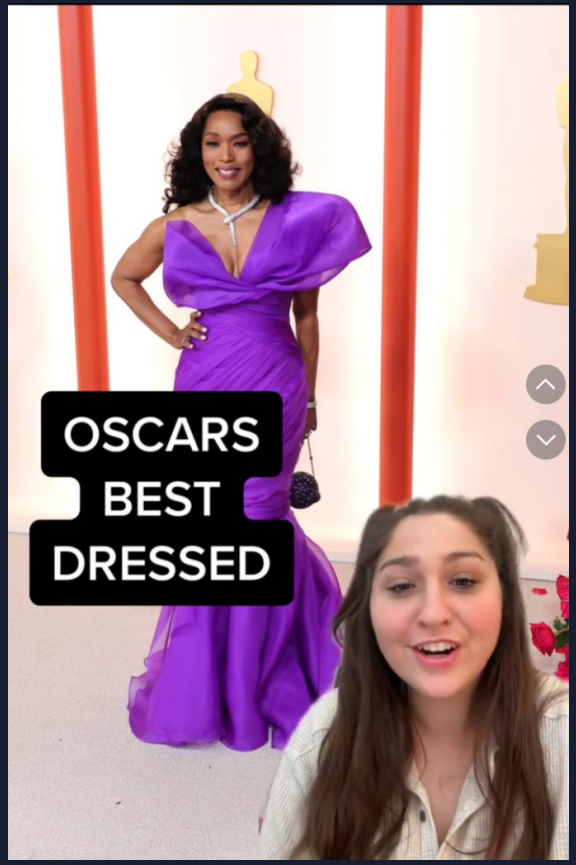

The vast majority of the comments share enthusiasm for certain looks or celebrities.

FASHION & RED CARPET

A popular video from Variety Magazine shares some of the ‘best dressed’ looks from the Oscars red carpet, with detailed commentary. She even shares the nominations or categories for some of the celebrities, which is less common in fashion videos that tend to focus on the looks, stylists, etc.

The creator shares, “This is giving old Hollywood glamor, I absolutely love the silhouette she’s created…”. Though it gained 340,000+ views, commentary engagement is limited, but organic replies are primarily positive, agreeing with the creator.

HOST & PRESENTERS

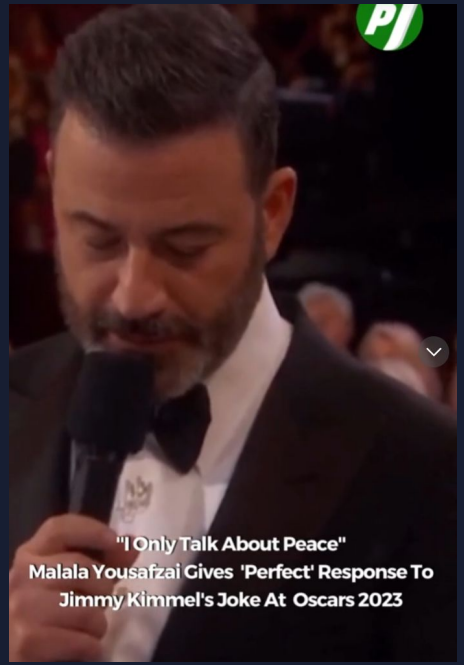

Jimmy Kimmel using humor to address a past notorious incident is generally well received. He wins praise as an Oscars host "Jimmy killed it. 👍" "So good!!! 🔥🔥🔥🔥😂what a brilliant way to address the slap! Great job Jimmy!"

The moment incorporated many popular but varied celebrities into the joke, including Michelle Yeoh, Pedro Pascal, and Andrew Garfield, possibly contributing to the success on social media.

HOST & PRESENTERS

This creator shares a negative opinion, referring to Jimmy Kimmel's joke while speaking with Malala, and the 2023 Oscars. They advocate for Hasan Minhaj as an alternative. However, the comments are split, with users debating her perspective on the joke and opinions on Minhaj.

HOST & PRESENTERS

Though not hosts, Maya Rudolph, Tina Fey and Amy Poehler were popular celebrity guests at the 2022 Oscars.

They received positive comments, “Can they just host every award show every year,” “They are brilliant 😂😂 , always immaculate and spot on!! ✨✨✨”, igniting little controversy.

HOST & PRESENTERS

In a critical commentary video, the creator reveals their selection of some of the worst Oscar hosts. Most negative was James Franco and Anne Hathaway in 2011, citing their awkward lack of charisma and humor. Many comments were quick to disagree with others on the list, “Seth McFarland was the BEST host!” or “I love Neil Patrick Harris.” Most agree that Amy Schumer was not a successful host.

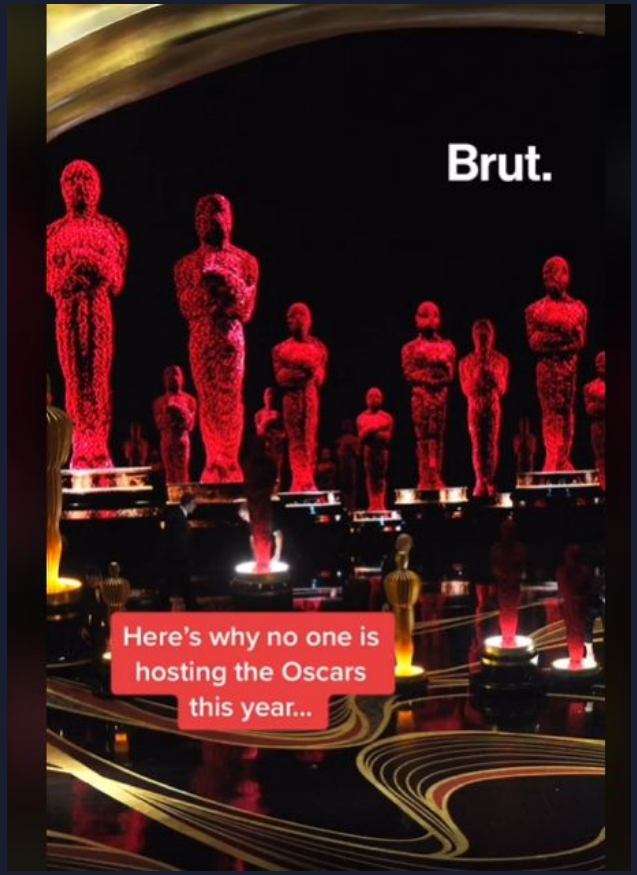

HOST & PRESENTERS

A 2021 video produced by Brut. analyzes the second year with no host, attributing it to Kevin Hart having been slotted for the role, but ultimately stepping down after homophobic tweets. Many comments defend Hart, but the video overall generated negative sentiment toward the Oscars with comments like

- “9 mill watched the grammys this year. it's only going to go down.”
- “the oscars are slowly counting themselves out and won't be so important anymore…”

The lack of a host contributes to the idea of Oscars declining in popularity, even in avoiding controversy.

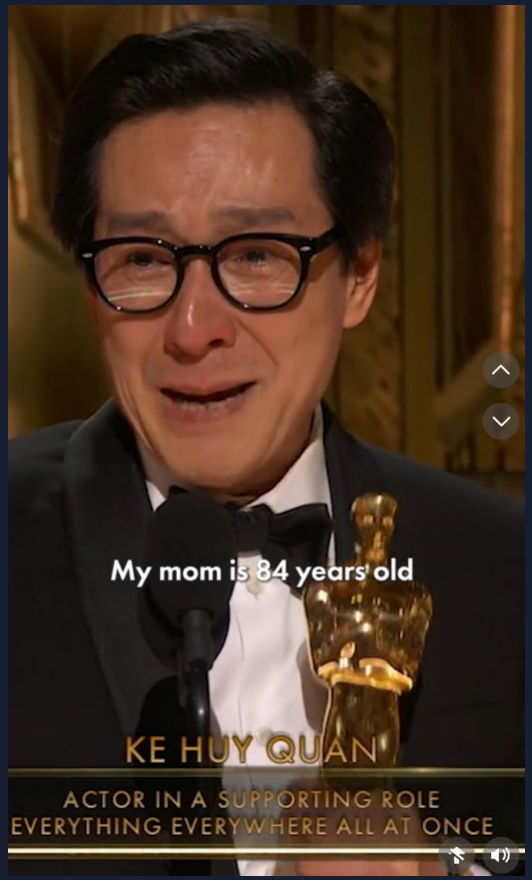

SPEECHES & PERFORMANCES

A notable moment on social media from last year's Oscars, as Ke Huy Quan accepts his award Best Supporting Actor with a heartfelt speech. The comments are overwhelmingly supportive, with fans sharing their own emotional reactions. The magic of his triumph continues to resonate in the hearts of fans, forever a cherished memory in award show history.

Many reported shedding a few tears as he expressed his gratitude. Other commenters share, “YES YES YES SO WELL DESERVED!!!!!” and “SOBBING😭 it took this man almost 40 years to realize his dream & he never gave up🥺”

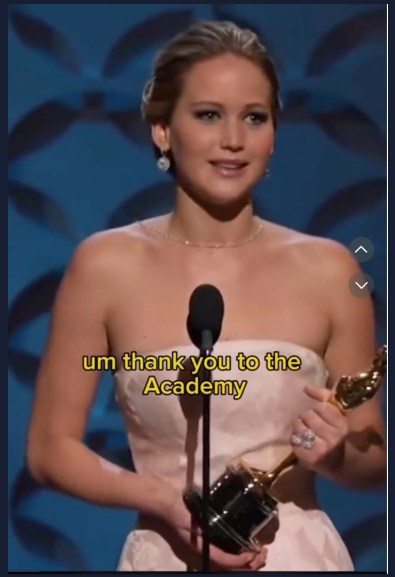

It received many positive comments from popular creators, including influencer Elyse Myers and Gen-Z content creator Sara Echeagaray, and brands ranging from Ulta Beauty to Scrub Daddy.

SPEECHES & PERFORMANCES

Lupita Nyong's emotional speech after winning Best Supporting Actress in 2014 resurfaces. Many comments share their love for the actress, "That blue dress is just stunning 🤩 Lupita is a gem," and praise her delivery and authenticity.

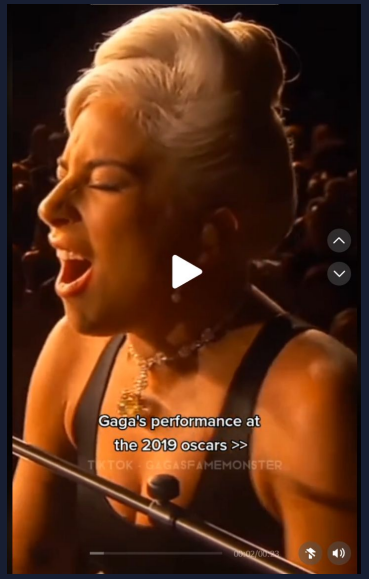

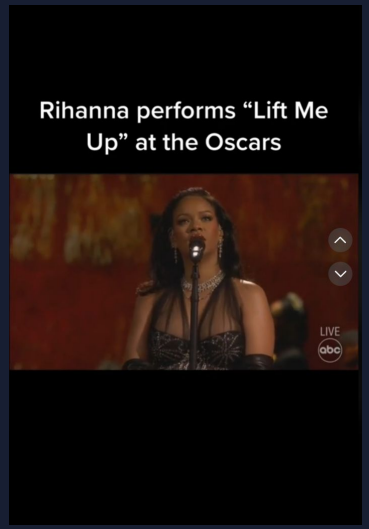

An iconic Oscar's moment, Jennifer Lawrence accepts her award after tripping on the stairs, frequently reposted on socials. It highlights Jennifer's appreciative and humble speech for her 2013 win for "Silver Linings Playbook". Shared in late 2023, many posts in the last year revisit memorable speeches. Comments overflow with positive sentiment, celebrating her relatability and down-to-earth charm.

SPEECHES & PERFORMANCES

Reflecting on Gaga's 2019 Oscar performance, this creator suggests it's one of the best. Most comments are positive, acknowledging her powerful singing and impressive piano skills. Some are reminded of her speech, "i still remember crying my heart out when she got the Oscar, her speech was>>>>".

Posted by Variety Magazine following Rhianna's 2023 Oscar performance. Commenters shared their feelings toward her performance, primarily positive, excited about her 'return' to the stage and praising her singing skills. A comment suggests the gravity of an Oscars performance, "From the Super Bowl to the Oscars, Rihanna is back🤩."
